in measuring the pressure of a liquid in a conduit, a pipe, or a gas-liquid mixture or other system having a volume. The pressure transducer is often attached to the container containing the liquid or other medium, which may be a gas, a liquid or a mixture of a liquid and a gas. There are many types of pressure transducers, and each provides a different output characteristic. In the industry, a pressure transducer is often designated by its output, such as its output is in kilopascals, bar or other units. An example
