Edgar thorpe.Myanmar (Burma) As of December 2016, Gay and Lesbian people in Myanmar are not legally recognized as belonging to a visible minority and at the same time their rights were not set to a specific number or percentage of any population. History In 1956, the British colonialists first included homosexuality in legislation to prohibit it. In 1957, The Public Order Act of the Burmese Government was amended to add to article 52[5] the sentence "Whoever, within the prohibited period, commits a crime under this Act by helping to commit such crime, or by being at the place of commission, shall be punished with imprisonment from three months to three years and with fine" Thus, the sentence was to imprison gay people in prison for three months to three years as punishment for helping to commit a crime such as same-sex sex. In 1978, a law passed which banned homosexual activity as an activity, except for consenting adults. So, any sexual activity other than marriage between people of the same sex was a criminal offence. In 1983, a revised law came into place which deemed that all homosexuals were sexual offenders and would be imprisoned for life. In 2008, the Myanmar Penal Code was amended to include: "Whoever commits a crime against public morality, the person shall be punished with imprisonment from three months to two years and a fine from 50,000 to 100,000 kyats" There are no LGBTI hate crime laws in Myanmar, and there 79a2804d6b
